

An Investment Analysis Case Study: Nike

This case is a group project that is due on March 28 just before class begins at 10:30.

Format: Each group will turn in one report (sounds obvious, but might as well make it explicit). Each report should have a cover page that contains the following – the names of the group members in alphabetical order and the following summary information on the analysis:

Decision on Expansion: Accept or Reject

Return on capital: % value

NPV: $ value

IRR: % value

Exhibit 2 summarizes Nike's income statement for the last 4 years, and Exhibit 3 summarizes its balance sheet for the last 2 years.

Nike, which currently views itself as operating in the sporting wear (shoes and clothes) segment, is considering an expansion into the fashion apparel business, producing high-priced casual clothing for teenagers and young adults. You have been asked to collect the data to make the assessment and have come back with the following information:

1. You estimate that it will cost Nike $ 2.5 billion to establish a presence in this business. Of this amount, $ 1 billion will have to be spent right now acquiring land, equipment and other assets needed for the business. There will be an additional $ 1 billion investment a year from now, and final investment of $ 0.5 billion at the end of 2 years. The business will be operational at the start of the third year.
2. Of the initial investment of $ 2.5 billion, $1.5 billion is fully depreciable over 10 years starting in the third year, and will be depreciated using double-declining
