

An Investment Analysis Case Study: Nike

This case is a group project that is due on March 28 just before class begins at 10:30.

Format: Each group will turn in one report (sounds obvious, but might as well make it explicit). Each report should have a cover page that contains the following – the names of the group members in alphabetical order and the following summary information on the analysis:

Decision on Expansion: Accept or Reject

Return on capital: % value

NPV: $ value

IRR: % value

And please don't title it: "Just do it".

With its dominance of the athletic shoe and sporting apparel businesses, Nike generated $2.81 billion in operating income on revenues of $20.9 billion in the fiscal year that ended in May 2011. While its stock price has rebounded in the last three years (see Exhibit 1), its sales and earnings are being affected by increased competition from both established firms (like Reebok and Adidas) and upstarts (such as Under Armour). Exhibit 2 summarizes Nike's income statement for the last 4 years, and Exhibit 3 summarizes its balance sheet for the last 2 years.

Nike, which currently views itself as operating in the sporting wear (shoes and clothes) segment, is considering an expansion into the fashion apparel business, producing high-priced casual clothing for teenagers and young adults. You have been asked to collect the data to make the assessment and have come back with the following information:

1. You estimate that it will cost Nike $ 2.5 billion to establish a presence in this business. Of this amount, $ 1 billion will have to be spent right now acquiring land, equipment and other assets needed for the business. There will be an additional $ 1 billion investment a year from now, and final investment of $ 0.5 billion at the end of 2 years. The business will be operational at the start of the third year.
2. Of the initial investment of $ 2.5 billion, $1.5 billion is fully depreciable over 10 years starting in the third year, and will be depreciated using double-declining

Industrialization in Ethiopia: Awakening - Crisis - Outlooks Reimer Gronemeyer, Michaela Fink, 2023-11-23 Ethiopia though remaining one of the least urbanised countries in the world has taken impressive actions to transform the state into a more industrialized nation Several industrial parks have been built in recent years throughout the whole country The textile sector is one of these sectors The textile industry is expected to provide employment for hundreds of thousands and thus improve people's living conditions and contribute to the development of the country Major reason for Asian investors to shift their focus to Ethiopia are extremely low wages and the lower production costs involved The Ethiopian textile industry has to deal with high rates of labor turnover and absenteeism From the perspective of the mostly international managers the reason for turnover and absenteeism is often attributed to the mindset of the predominantly female workforce A research project financed by the German Bundesministerium für wirtschaftliche Zusammenarbeit und Entwicklung is looking at reasons and possible measures to solve this problem Results of this project conducted at the University of Giessen by Michaela Fink and Reimer Gronemeyer together with Ethiopian colleagues are presented in this book Experts from Ethiopia and Germany are presenting the history of the textile industry in Ethiopia and the coming development All this is framed by the discussion of present crisis Covid 19 the war in Ethiopia

Sustainable Finance and the Global Health Crisis Pasquale Marcello Falcone, Edgardo Sica, 2023-08-01 The speed with which the various economies recover from the Covid 19 pandemic will significantly determine the economic pressure placed on the environment in the medium to long term Furthermore the pandemic has highlighted the strong interrelations between natural and societal systems with societal resilience depending on a resilient environmental support system In this context the book argues that the pandemic represents a wake up call for financial systems to be better prepared for the climate crisis and social risk and has provided a stimulus to scale down the reliance of the global economy on fossil fuels The first part of the book provides a deep and creative discussion between leading international researchers and experts on the policy options and financial instruments which can help to catalyze the green finance transition in the post Covid 19 era The contributions show that sustainable finance is emerging as a powerful tool to advance the transition towards a more environmentally and socially sustainable economic model Instruments such as sovereign green bonds green securities and other sustainability related securities can play a significant role in the post Covid 19 world to fund economic stimulus and to lead the way to new and more sustainable future The second part of the book supports the debate by highlighting a number of selected case studies on financing transitions in different regional contexts including Africa Asia Europe and Latin America The book marks a significant contribution to the literature on environmental economics and finance climate change and sustainability transitions Chapter 12 of this book is freely available as a downloadable Open Access PDF at <http://www.taylorfrancis.com> under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4 0 license
