Flow diagrams

Define what is meant by the term 'pseudocode'. - answer Pseudocode is similar to a high-level programming language, but does not require exact syntax/indentation to be used. The programmer can concentrate on getting the logic of the program correct before turning it into executable code.

Describe how a linear search algorithm works. - answer A linear search algorithm starts at the beginning of a list and moves through item by item until it finds the matching item or reaches the end of the list.

Describe the stages of a binary search on a list of items sorted in ascending order. - answer 1. Select the middle item (median).

2. Compare this value with your search criterion. If 3. they are equal then stop.

3. If it is higher, repeat with the right-hand side of the list.

4. Repeat these steps until the search criterion is found or there are no more items in the list to search.

A binary search is generally more efficient than a linear search. However, this is not always the case.

Explain why using a linear search may be quicker than using a binary search in some circumstances. - answer For a binary search, the data must first be sorted into ascending order. Sorting the data will take time so, for a small number of search items, a linear search might find the search item more quickly.
