Chapter 1 — Business Combinations: America's Most Popular Business Activity, Bringing an End to the Controversy

MULTIPLE CHOICE

- An economic advantage of a business combination includes
 - Utilizing duplicative assets.
 - Creating separate management teams.
 - Coordinated marketing campaigns.
 - Horizontally combining levels within the marketing chain.
- A tax advantage of business combination can occur when the existing owner of a company sells out and receives:
 - cash to defer the taxable gain as a "tax-free reorganization."
 - stock to defer the taxable gain as a "tax-free reorganization."
 - cash to create a taxable gain.
 - stock to create a taxable gain.
- A controlling interest in a company implies that the parent company
 - owns all of the subsidiary's stock.
 - has influence over a majority of the subsidiary's assets.
 - has paid cash for a majority of the subsidiary's stock.
 - has transferred common stock for a majority of the subsidiary's outstanding bonds and debentures.
- Which of the following is a potential abuse that may arise when a business combination is accounted for as a pooling of interests?
 - Assets of the buyer may be overvalued when the price paid by the investor is allocated among specific assets.
 - Earnings of the pooled entity may be increased because of the combination only and not as a result of efficient operations.
 - Liabilities may be undervalued when the price paid by the investor is allocated to specific liabilities.
 - An undue amount of cost may be assigned to goodwill, thus potentially allowing an understatement of pooled earnings.
- Company B acquired the assets (net of liabilities) of Company S in exchange for cash. The acquisition price exceeds the fair value of the net assets acquired. How should Company B determine the amounts to be reported for the plant and equipment, and for long-term debt of the acquired Company S?
