● Aim and purpose

The aim of this unit is to enable learners to understand potential threats to IT systems and the organisational issues related to IT security, and know how to keep systems and data secure from these threats.

● Unit introduction

Ensuring the security of computer systems and, crucially, the information they need is vital. Organisations and customers require confidence in these matters and security is critical to the successful deployment and use of IT. In this unit learners will consider physical security of computer systems from simple locks to complex biometric checks, as well as software-based security using, for example, passwords, access rights and encryption.

Potential threats to security arise in different ways. For example security problems are sometimes related directly to malicious intent from internal or external sources, but in other circumstances, such as software piracy, problems can occur by accident or unknowingly. The advent of e-commerce brought with it a whole new set of potential threats and issues for organisations to deal with.

Successful completion of this unit will ensure that all learners and new entrants to the IT industry understand the underlying principles of systems security as well as developing the knowledge to apply these principles to ensure the security of systems they will be using. Specific technologies, risks and preventative measures are considered, as well as organisational issues, constraints and policies that impact security, along with legislation specifically relating to computer use.

Security measures are usually in place to serve and protect our privacy and our rights. Security procedures can threaten these rights, for instance the right to have private email. The trade off between security and freedom raises important ethical issues and this unit allows learners to consider ethical decisions and how they can be managed effectively in a modern organisation.

● Learning outcomes

On completion of this unit a learner should:

- 1 Understand the impact of potential threats to IT systems
- 2 Know how organisations can keep systems and data secure
- 3 Understand the organisational issues affecting the security of IT systems.

Vocational Studies, Lifelong Learning and Social Values Terry Hyland, 2019-06-24 Published in 1999 Lifelong learning is the slogan with which the Labour Government has chosen to publicise and popularise its values and policies for post 16 education and training under the new administration Dr Hyland's book subjects New Labour policy particularly developments surrounding the University for Industry and the New Deal to searching scrutiny and offers a number of recommendations designed to upgrade vocational education and training VET If we are to create a high status and high quality VET system comparable to those of our European competitors we will need Dr Hyland argues to move towards a unified curriculum in the post school sector bringing with it the abolition of the present three track model of NVQs GNVQs and GCSEs A Levels More significantly it is argued that all vocational learning both work based and college based needs to be underpinned by a common core of knowledge and understanding and crucially be located within a values framework which gives due attention to social justice and community interests rather than simplistic and utilitarian economic objectives and employability skills Moreover the aesthetic and moral dimensions of vocational studies are not optional extras but areas of vocational learning experience which are essential and foundational if vocational education and training is to be enhanced in order to satisfy current lifelong learning criteria Dr Hyland's challenging account provides one of the first comprehensive philosophical and policy critiques of New Labour VET developments and will be of interest to those committed to high quality vocational studies on all sides of education and industry as well as to lecturers tutors trainers and students working in post compulsory education and training
