QUESTIONS

Are you able to distinguish, based on the questions in school

- Why are solids, liquids and gasses grouped together?
- Why are substances and mixtures classified together?

What are Physical Properties?

Start with the solids in the diagram below as shown in a table to record the changes in their various properties.

If physical properties of substances are observed without changing the identity of the substance, these are called physical properties. For example, you can identify an object as solid, liquid, gas, etc. or weight, colour, etc. without changing the identity of the object. The object is identified by the properties of the substance. The object remains as it.

Many of the physical properties of substances that make up objects are intensive. These properties include density, hardness, refractive index, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on the amount of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties from smaller amounts of the material. These physical properties are called extensive properties. Colour, physical properties are not dependent on the amount of the substance. They show that the matter has a definite composition and potential to show particular property or change the same.

LEARNING OBJECTIVE
