Athlete Burnout Among High School Drill Team Members Tayler Jackson, 2025 High school drill team is an intensive year round sport that exposes athletes to heightened risk of burnout yet little research has examined this issue within the drill community This study investigated burnout among 59 recently graduated drill team athletes in the Rocky Mountain region using the Athlete Burnout Questionnaire ABQ The ABQ measured emotional physical exhaustion reduced sense of accomplishment and sport devaluation with results analyzed through descriptive statistics one way ANOVA and thematic coding of open ended responses Findings showed that emotional and physical exhaustion was the most prevalent form of burnout with 83.1% of athletes reporting moderate to high levels Reduced accomplishment 32.2% and sport devaluation 28.8% were less frequent suggesting many athletes are in the early stages of burnout Qualitative data highlighted coaching issues and overwhelming time demands as the leading contributors These results suggest that burnout is shaped less by school size or competition level and more by workload management recovery opportunities and coach athlete dynamics Recommendations include structured rest balanced training and autonomy supportive coaching to safeguard athlete well being Journal of Sport & Exercise Psychology, 2008

Research Quarterly for Exercise and Sport, 2009 Literature Reviews in Sport Psychology Sheldon Hanton, 2006 Sport Psychology research has developed and expanded considerably over the last decade or two Its accelerating volume of research output embraces a wide variety of topics having both academic and practical impact and relating to other areas of Sports Science and also the broader overall discipline of mainstream psychology In this busy and developing arena the healthy and productive evolution of a research topic requires the periodic summarisation reflection and feedback that is the domain of the literature review A review acts as the primary catalyst for a topic s emerging organisation reorganisation and structure and generates perspectives and pointers for further study directions it establishes reference points and foundations for continued progress By its very nature it tends to be a larger publication than a typical focused research paper The pathways to publication of Sport Psychology research are often severely congested For example in 2004 four of the main refereed outlets for original research in Sport Psychology The Sport Psychologist the Journal of Applied Sport Psychology the Journal of Sport and Exercise Psychology and the Psychology of Sport and Exercise received over 400 submissions private communications Inevitably the space that established journals can afford to grant to review articles is limited both in terms of the article size and the frequency with which topics can be visited Although reviews that appear in books usually enjoy a larger and more appropriate space allocation they typically have not carried the hallmark of external independent peer review that journal publication provides This collection presents a number of contemporary reviews of significant and popular topics from some prominent researchers within each area An important and distinctive feature of this volume is that all the chapters have been subjected to peer review by expert referees a process usually reserved solely for journal publications This book offers up to date literature reviews with a distinctive conceptual theoretical and practical focus the environmental demands of this occupation several studies have been conducted to investigate how various factors may influence the careers health and potential burnout of these practitioners e g Kania Meyer Kahanov Eberman Deci Raedeke Pelletier et al 1995 and the Work Need Satisfaction Survey WNSS Deci Connell however 61 1% of the variance in the T1 total burnout scores could be explained by number of days off per week amotivation identified regulation and perceived autonomy Finally while these ATs did not score particularly high on burnout their supervisors should be still be aware of the symptoms and treatment methods for this condition In addition managers should also encourage ATs to take time away from work to tend to their needs Lastly through BPN satisfaction more self determined forms of motivation should develop as a result

Interpersonal, Individual, and Situational Factors Associated with Burnout in Student Athletes Alexis James Vlahos,1997 The Relationship Between Burnout, Motivation, and Exercise Habits in Retired College Athletes Jenna Hering,2022 The effect of sport burnout on retired college athletes has not been widely researched However there are several studies that show sport burnout is present in athletes and can be influenced by different factors including motivation Also studies have shown that physical activity plays an important role in any college aged person and can decrease in former college athletes in retirement Therefore the purpose of this research was to review athlete burnout motivation specialization and exercise habits in retired college athletes Participants recently retired within two years and played at least one full season filled out the Athlete Burnout Questionnaire ABQ International Physical Activity Questionnaire Short Form IPAQ SF Sport Motivation Scale SMS and demographic questionnaires voluntarily Athletes were recruited via email blast to the UCO student body Pearson s Product Momentum Correlation was conducted to see if there was any relationship between the variables A significant relationship did not exist between any of the variables p 05 therefore a multiple regression was not used to further analyze The researcher hypothesized that motivation would show a strong relationship with exercise habits burnout would show a strong relationship with decreased exercise habits and sports specialization would show a strong relationship with decreased exercise habits and increased burnout in retired college athletes The researcher concluded there was no relationship between burnout motivation specialization and exercise habits in this population Further research is suggested to investigate other relationships like coach s influence on burnout and observing burnout at different points of athlete s careers
