Key vocabulary

A multiculturalism is a complex issue and a constantly moving target. The definition can be understood in both descriptive and normative, while the latter is characterized by further extended ideas. A descriptive multiculturalism refers to several different ethnic groups (linguistic, racial, ethnic, class, geographic) and different attitudes to various matters (religious, cultural, language) that are not defined as disadvantaged, leading to identifying the more disadvantaged, supporting the people most in need.

Religion has always played a major role in the history of multiculturalism. Many other fundamental multiculturalist approaches such as religion-informed legalism, feminism, and so on, have also been used. The Transnationalist has been called more "cultural capital" Multiculturalism has provided a focus of the language multiculturalist approaches. This multiculturalism has been used to describe the process of globalization, and the relationship of the cultural communities. Multiculturalism is also related to the contemporary multicultural studies, they have emerged in the developed multicultural countries that have the multiculturalist goals.

The Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is an multicultural state that also is one of the most conservative Islamic countries. Saudi Arabia's political system is based on a strict Islamic law, as stated in the constitution of the country, and all government activities are controlled by Islamic law. The Islamic law is based on the Quran and the Sunnah, which are the two main sources of Islamic law. In addition, the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia is a religious state that is characterized by a strong Islamic identity.
