2011: Under-utilized through seven weeks while coordinator Cam Cameron loosened the reins on Joe Flacco, Rice saw fewer than 24 touches just twice the rest of the way. After closing out the season as fantasy's top back over the final five weeks, the three-down back sealed a first-place finish in total fantasy points over LeSean McCoy. Bouncing back from a disappointing 2010 campaign, Rice established career-highs in rushing yards (1,364), touchdowns (15), and receiving yards (704) while averaging a stout 4.7 yards per carry.

What's Changed

What Changed: : Backup Ricky Williams retired. Second-round pick Bernard Pierce is expected to take his place as the No. 2 back.

2012 Outlook

Outlook: There's a minor workload alert for a player who missed offseason practices while waiting to sign his franchise-tag tender. Although Rice has talent, youth, and top-notch conditioning on his side, the track record for backs coming off 400-touch seasons is cause for slight pause. As long as Rice stays healthy, however, there are few backs that can match his consistency in touches and effectiveness while playing all three downs and handling goal-line chores.
