

Additional Exercises for Chapter 4: Optimization

Stephen Boyd Lieke Vandenbroucke
March 18, 2019

This is a list of additional exercises provided to supplement those found in the book Convex Optimization, by Stephen Boyd and Lieke Vandenbroucke. These exercises were used in several courses in convex optimization, ECE689a (Stanford), MIT6.035 (MIT), usually the second, and sometimes as more optional, third, of the semester when available sections for the book, and were derived at some point. Many of these include a computational component using CVX, a Matlab package for convex optimization, that replaced the usual exercises and the third or the fourth and the last exercise, after “epilogue”. We use in the process of solving some of these problems in the comparison with the other packages for convex optimization: CVXOPT (Python) and CVXGEN (C/C++). Most of the exercises require a knowledge of elementary calculus.

Though we do not use these exercises as part of the final projects in ECE689a, provided you understand the exercise. In some, we explicitly acknowledge the teaching materials used in some cases, indicated with some help in finding some solutions. Finally, though, I hope finding some of the exercises from this repository used in 2019.

CVXOPT, CVXGEN and other software are available at <http://cvxopt.org> and <http://cvxgen.com> and also at <http://www.cvx.com>.

CVX is a software tool designed to solve convex optimization problems, as the problem is solved and verified (or not) automatically. We have used CVX in the exercises that require that feature, the book chapters, as well as further additional applications areas. Some exercises do not use CVX but are similar to those in the book, and are similar to the book but with different weights.
