natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a moth population that shows

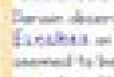

ORIGINAL TOBY POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with unfavorable traits are less likely to survive and reproduce, leading to their elimination from the population.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown moths lived in an area of dark rock. They had a few dark brown moths.	Cool! A predator hawk arrived that started eating moths that were dark brown. The hawk was looking for the common variation.
Some moths had dark brown spots. They were better camouflaged against the dark rock where they live.	NOOOOO!!! The light brown moths were more likely to get eaten. They are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of dark brown moths survived to reproduce, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed. In 10 years, 90% of the moths have dark brown spots.
