What Is a Galaxy?

Read the passage and answer the questions.

A galaxy is a massive system of stars, stellar remnants, interstellar gas, dust, and dark matter all bound together by gravity. Galaxies come in various shapes and sizes and the most common form is being spiral galaxies. Other common galaxy shapes include elliptical galaxies, irregular galaxies, and dwarf galaxies.

The Milky Way is the galaxy that contains our solar system and is classified as a barred spiral galaxy. It is estimated to have over 100 billion stars and spans about 100,000 light-years in diameter. Locally, our own galaxy has a central bar structure, surrounded by a ring of stars. Other galaxy shapes include elliptical galaxies, irregular galaxies, and dwarf galaxies.

Galaxies are crucial to understanding the universe's structure and evolution. They are the building blocks of the universe, and studying them can provide insight into the formation of stars and planetary systems. Observing distant galaxies allows astronomers to look back in time to the light from these galaxies, which is seen as redshifted light. This is how we know that the universe is expanding.

The study of galaxies has advanced significantly with the development of powerful telescopes and space observatories. Astronomers use the Hubble Space Telescope, the James Webb Space Telescope, and other observatories to study galaxies and their evolution. They also use computer simulations to model the formation and evolution of galaxies.

Understanding galaxies not only enhances our knowledge of the universe but also helps us understand our own place in it. Each galaxy is a vast and diverse system, and we are fortunate to be part of one.
