Mühlberger,2018-01-12 If we want to understand people's responses to threats in social interactions we can distinguish between three levels of analysis On a social level of analysis we can describe people's interpersonal behavior on a cognitive level we can identify corresponding information processing mechanisms and on a neural level we can specify neural systems which underlie these processes In this Research Topic we want to present research connecting these three levels of analysis and propose their functional interconnection in social interaction We propose that threats in social interactions activate basic motivational processes which manifest in neural processes related to behavioral inhibition vs activation in a social situation This shapes our attention to new information and affects our cognitions about social identities belief systems and worldviews These changes in social cognition in turn affect people's behavior in social interactions and lead to corresponding reactions on behalf of the interaction partner Thus we assume that people's reactions to threat in interactions can be described as sequences of broader attentional processes resulting from basic motivational tendencies leading to specific social cognitions and subsequent behavior within social interactions We can analyze this sequence in order to contribute to a better understanding of social interactions The three levels of analyses social cognitive neural shed light on social interactions from different angles On the social level we can analyze how the behaviors of the interaction partners mutually affect each other and how this is accompanied by specific cognitive emotional and motivational processes On the cognitive level we can analyze people s perception of a social situation leading to attentional and reasoning processes with regard to their interaction partner s which may be accompanied by certain emotional and motivational processes and determines the behavior towards the partner s Finally we can focus on the neural mechanisms underlying cognitive emotional and motivational processes in social interactions

Where the Crows Fly Backwards Nancy Blacklow,Troy Whitford,2010 National identity and the search for its defining features has been the focus of continuing debate throughout Australian history From ideals of mateship to celebration of sporting prowess from multiculturalism to homogeneity and social cohesion Australian national identity has been discussed and debated for more than a century in later years mainly by politicians and the media At the same time there have been many attempts to define rural identity as something at the heart of Australian nationalism Charles Sturt University with its spread of campuses across regional New South Wales is intellectually and geographically well positioned to ponder notions of regional and rural identity Its staff and students live various forms of a rural lifestyle so in formulating this collection it was a valid step to seek their ideas on what represents regional and rural identity Within the School of Humanities and Social Sciences there are a range of disciplines which bring different perspectives to the vexed question of a unique rural identity The aim of this collection is not to provide a definitive answer to the question of what constitutes rural identity but to illustrate the many ways and forms it can be seen
