If physical properties of substances are observed without changing the identity of the substance, these are called physical properties of an object. For example, you can identify an object's colour, shape, size, or weight. In general, the properties of an object are determined by the properties of the particles that compose it.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects are [invariant]. These properties include density, hardness, magnetism, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties than a smaller amount of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small a sample of material is, the particular property is always the same.
