

Chapter 10: The Nervous System

1. The nervous system is responsible for coordinating and controlling all the activities of the body.

(a) What are the two main types of neurons?

Motor neurons carry signals away from the central nervous system, and sensory neurons carry signals towards the central nervous system.

(b) What is the function of a neuron?

To transmit electrical signals.

(c) What is the function of the brain?

The brain is the central processing unit of the nervous system, receiving information from all parts of the body and sending out instructions.

(d) What are the main parts of the brain?

The cerebrum, cerebellum, brainstem, and spinal cord.

2. The nervous system is divided into the central nervous system (CNS) and the peripheral nervous system (PNS). The CNS consists of the brain and spinal cord, while the PNS consists of all the other nerves.

(a) What are the main types of neurons in the CNS?

Motor neurons, sensory neurons, and interneurons.

(b) What are the main types of neurons in the PNS?

Sensory neurons and motor neurons.

(c) How do neurons communicate with each other?

Through synapses, where electrical signals are converted into chemical signals.

(d) What is the function of the myelin sheath?

To insulate neurons and speed up the transmission of electrical signals.

(e) What are the main types of neurotransmitters?

Acetylcholine, dopamine, serotonin, and norepinephrine.

D. Walker,D. Christopher Brooks,Kem Saichaie,Christina I. Petersen,2023-07-03 While Active Learning Classrooms or ALCs offer rich new environments for learning they present many new challenges to faculty because among other things they eliminate the room's central focal point and disrupt the conventional seating plan to which faculty and students have become accustomed The importance of learning how to use these classrooms well and to capitalize on their special features is paramount The potential they represent can be realized only when they facilitate improved learning outcomes and engage students in the learning process in a manner different from traditional classrooms and lecture halls This book provides an introduction to ALCs briefly covering their history and then synthesizing the research on these spaces to provide faculty with empirically based practical guidance on how to use these unfamiliar spaces effectively Among the questions this book addresses are How can instructors mitigate the apparent lack of a central focal point in the space What types of learning activities work well in the ALCs and take advantage of the affordances of the room How can teachers address familiar classroom management challenges in these unfamiliar spaces If assessment and rapid feedback are critical in active learning how do they work in a room filled with circular tables and no central focus point How do instructors balance group learning with the needs of the larger class How can students be held accountable when many will necessarily have their backs facing the instructor How can instructors evaluate the effectiveness of their teaching in these spaces This book is intended for faculty preparing to teach in or already working in this new classroom environment for administrators planning to create ALCs or experimenting with provisionally designed rooms and for faculty developers helping teachers transition to using these new spaces
