

Pharmacokinetics of Insulin 7

Insulin is a water-soluble protein hormone. It is secreted by the beta cells of the pancreas. It acts on target tissues to regulate glucose metabolism. The pharmacokinetics of insulin are characterized by its short half-life and its rapid action on target tissues.

The half-life of insulin in the blood is approximately 5-10 minutes. This is due to its rapid degradation by insulinase (glucosyltransferase) in the liver and other tissues. The action of insulin is also rapid, with effects being seen within minutes of administration.

The liver is a major site of insulin degradation. Insulin is rapidly taken up by the liver and degraded by insulinase. This results in a short half-life of insulin in the blood.
