Quality of Life Improvement: Smart Approaches for the Working and Aging Populations Sabina Baraković, Zahid Akhtar, Jasmina Barakovic Husic, 2024-03-19 Quality of life QoL is a broad concept that has many definitions and meanings depending on the context under consideration. It can be perceived as the overall enjoyment of life and a multidimensional concept which emphasizes the self-perceptions of an individual's current state of mind which is affected in a complex way by the person's physical health, psychological state, personal beliefs, social relationships, and their relationship to salient features of their environment. On the other hand, demographic data suggests an increased need for workers worldwide and a rapid aging trend in the active workforce as well as in general. This trend of workforce deficit and population aging will be even more prominent in the future. Therefore, in order to have and sustain a healthy, motivated, and productive workforce but also healthy, independent, and active elderly adults, one must improve their QoL, and vice versa. Improving QoL will improve general public health and in turn create communities who can contribute in diverse and positive ways to both promote and sustain health for future generations.

Aging: Challenges and Opportunities for Inclusion and Active Participation Ramona Bongelli, Gonzalo Del Moral, Alessandra Fermani, Paola Nicolini, Chiara Aleffi, Veronica Guardabassi, 2025-12-10 The world population is progressively aging, and a reflection on how older people frail and not can actively participate in society and experience a sense of inclusion is increasingly urgent. Addressing the health needs of this population segment is often complex and full of challenges, including technological ones: just think of the increasing number of tools for remote monitoring of their health, but perhaps even more so is maintaining their psychological and relational well-being and that of those who care for them in situations of frailty. This Research Topic seeks to gather original contributions that delve into the psychological and communicative aspects of aging, with a focus on the implications for both older adults and the broader societal context. The scope extends beyond the elderly themselves to include those who care for them and the community at large, especially in terms of fostering understanding, inclusion, and active participation. The psychological perspective should be adopted as the preferred one, but research with an inter- or multidisciplinary approach is welcome, as are cross-cultural studies that may shed light on how various societies address aging-related issues. Potential topics of interest for this Research Topic include, but are not limited to: Psychological well-being of older adults and/or of caregivers supporting elderly individuals; Communication with older adults among older adults about older adults; Intergenerational dialogue; Older people and storytelling; Use of health technologies and their impacts on older adults and their caregivers Perceptions thoughts and stereotypes on aging Social relationships and group dynamics involving older adults Financing College Kristin Davis,1998 A thorough analysis of both the basics and the nuances by an editor of Kiplinger s Personal Finance Magazine Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR The Electrical Review ,1918 Agricultural Education Monthly ,1915 Biennial Convention of the Minnesota Association of the Deaf (Incorporated).
