applied to the whole of the British army after 1945 Histories of Britain's post war defence policy have usually focused on how and why Britain acquired a nuclear deterrent David French takes a new look at these policies by placing the army centre stage Drawing on archival sources that have hardly been used by historians he shows how British governments tried to create an army that would enable them to maintain their position as a major world power at a time when their economy struggled to foot the bill The result was a growing mismatch between the military resources that the government thought it could afford on the one hand and a long list of overseas commitments in Europe Africa the Middle East and the Far East that it was reluctant to surrender The result was that the British created a Potemkin army a force that had an outwardly impressive facade but that in reality had only very limited war fighting capabilities Army Empire and Cold War will interest not only historians of the British army but also those who are trying to understand Britain's role in the Cold War and how and why the British came to surrender formal rule over their empire
