CELLS

How do transport work for this example?

1. Surface ions are actively transported out the back, into the blood, by the gulliver.
2. Maintaining a concentration gradient of potassium ions in lumen than out.
3. Surface ions and glucose move by facilitated diffusion from the lumen, into a space.
4. Creating a concentration gradient of all glucose in epithelial cell than lumen.
5. Glucose moves out of cell into blood through a protein channel.

Water potential

Definition: High movement of water molecules across water potential gradient. They point water always

Water potential = the likelihood ('potential') of water

- Pure water has the highest water potential (0 kJ mol<sup>-1</sup>)
- Adding solutes to a solution lowers the water potential
- Measured in kilojoules mol<sup>-1</sup>
- Can be denoted by the symbol  $\psi$

How about osmosis?

- Osmosis = no ATP / energy required
- Factors affecting rate = surface area, water potential difference, thickness of exchange surface / diffusion distance

Application example:

- Red blood cells contain a variety of solutes dissolved
- If a red blood cell is placed in pure water, it will gain water potential than pure water
- The cell surface membrane will break and burst the cell
- However, if a red blood cell is placed in a solution of pure water, water will leave the cell by osmosis
- The cell shrinks and becomes dehydrated

Key takeaway point: Water will always move to a

Antibodies

Remember the definition of an antibody

Antibody: a protein, specific to an antigen, which

Structure of antibodies - key points

- Quaternary structural protein (links to 1.1.4.2)
- Composed of 4 polypeptide chains (2 heavy and 2 light) joined together by disulphide bridges
- Each polypeptide chain has a specific amino acid sequence
- Each polypeptide chain has a specific amino acid sequence

Exam question example:

- Describe and explain how the structure of an antibody
- Primary structure of protein = sequence of amino acids
- This determines the position of R-groups, some of which determine the specific shape of the protein
- Quaternary structure = 4 polypeptide chains held together by disulphide bridges
- Creates the specific shape / specific amino acid sequence
- Creates antigen antibody complex to form

Meiosis

The stage of the cell cycle where the cell spends most of its time in G1. Application example of this stage (this is about as much as you need to know) for your comprehensive induction from 1.1.5.2

- During meiosis, in addition to DNA replication, these processes are also occurring:
  - DNA replication
  - Protein synthesis
  - Replication of organelles

Meiosis

- Parent cell 'divides' into two in the G1 phase into two
- Results in the formation of two genetically identical daughter cells (stage of mitosis = G2)

Chromosome transcription: Mitosis is not actually the process where the cell divides into two daughter cells. Rather,

Mitosis is the process of the cell, sucking into two genetically identical cells again.

Diagram of mitosis

Prophase - key points:

- Chromosomes condense, becoming shorter and thicker (they appear as two sister chromatids, joined by a centromere)
- Chromosomes become visible under a microscope
- Nuclear envelope breaks down and granules move to opposite sides, forming the spindle network (needed for later stages)

Metaphase - key points:

- Chromosomes align along the equator / middle of the cell
- Spindle fibres attach to chromosomes by their centromeres
