

Team 1 - Costco Wholesale Corporation Case Analysis

Costco Wholesale Corporation is an American membership only warehouse club that provides a wide selection of merchandise. They are currently the largest membership only warehouse club in the United States, and as of 2014, Costco was the third largest retailer in the U.S. and the second largest in the world behind Walmart. Costco was founded in 1983 and its headquarters are in Issaquah, Washington. Costco operates an international chain of membership warehouses, mainly under the "Costco Wholesale" name, that carry quality, brand name merchandise at substantially lower prices than what are typically found at conventional wholesale or retail sources. Costco offers three types of memberships: Business, Gold Star (individual), and the Executive membership. Business members qualify by owning or operating a business and pay an annual fee of $55 in the U.S. to shop for resale, business, and personal use. The Gold Star membership is for individuals who do not own a business and is available for a $55 annual fee in the U.S. This fee includes a free household membership. The Company also has a third membership level, called the Executive Membership.

Costco's Mission:

"To continually provide our members with quality goods and services at the lowest possible prices."

Costco's mission statement shows that the business focuses on quality as a selling point. Quality is integral because there are many other firms that compete against Costco on the basis of low prices. The company's mission statement also indicates low prices as a major selling point. Customers are drawn to the discounts and low prices available at Costco. Moreover, the mission statement shows that these offers are always available at Costco warehouses to members. One key strategic objective linked to this mission statement is to develop a supply chain that supports cost minimization and high quality. The strategic objective of the company's intent is to sustain and improve the company's competitive strength and long-term market position through customer value. While financial objectives focus on achieving acceptable profitability in a company's pursuit of its mission and survival in revenues, Costco's mission will help to achieve our vision.

Costco's Vision:

"A place where efficient buying and operating practices give members access to unmatched savings."

The vision statement shows Costco's need to ensure efficiency in its operations. Efficiency is critical because it minimizes the costs that effect pricing. Cost minimization leads to the next point of the vision statement: unmatched savings. Costco's customers can expect such savings
