

- The Spectator adopted a fictional method of presentation through a “Spectator Club,” whose imaginary members extolled the authors’ own ideas about society.
- These “members” included representatives of commerce, the army, the town (respectively, Sir Andrew Freeport, Captain Sentry, and Will Honeycomb), and of the country gentry (Sir Roger de Coverley). The papers were ostensibly written by Mr. Spectator, an “observer” of the London scene.
- The conversations that The Spectator reported were often imagined to take place in coffeehouses, which was also where many copies of the publication were distributed and read.
- The Spectator served as a social microcosm within which a tone at once grave, good-humoured, and flexible could be sounded.
- The real authors of the essays were free to consider whatever topics they pleased, with reference to the fictional framework.

The Formation of College English Thomas P. Miller, 1997-04-15 In the middle of the eighteenth century English literature composition and rhetoric were introduced almost simultaneously into colleges throughout the British cultural provinces Professorships of rhetoric and belles lettres were established just as print was reaching a growing reading public and efforts were being made to standardize educated taste and usage The provinces saw English studies as a means to upward social mobility through cultural assimilation In the educational centers of England however the introduction of English represented a literacy crisis brought on by provincial institutions that had failed to maintain classical texts and learned languages Today as rhetoric and composition have become reestablished in the humanities in American colleges English studies are being broadly transformed by cultural studies community literacies and political controversies Once again English departments that are primarily departments of literature see these basic writing courses as a sign of a literacy crisis that is undermining the classics of literature The Formation of College English reexamines the civic concerns of rhetoric and the politics that have shaped and continue to shape college English Encyclopedia of British Writers, 16th, 17th, and 18th Centuries Book Builders LLC., 2005 Presents a two volume A to Z reference on English authors from the sixteenth seventeenth and eighteenth centuries providing information about major figures key schools and genres biographical information author publications and some critical analyses The Appreciation of Literature Ernest Edward Kellett, 1926 The Spectator, 1872 A weekly review of politics literature theology and art Critical Survey of Short Fiction, 2001 Critical Survey of Short Fiction Charles Edward May, Frank Northen Magill, 2001 Profiles more than four hundred authors of short fiction from around the world presenting biographical and bibliographic information and summaries of major works Also includes a reference volume with a chronology a bibliography lists of major award winners twenty nine essays on short fiction history theory and world cultures and three indexes The Modern Study of Literature Richard Green Moulton, 1915 Bookseller and the Stationery Trades' Journal, 1895 New England Journal of Education, 1877 The Cambridge Review, 1894 The Bookseller, 1895 General Catalogue of the Books Detroit Public Library, 1889 Police Funding, Dark Money, and the Greedy Institution Randy K. police departments this book examines key issues in private funding of public police including corporatization accountability corruption and the rule of law It documents and analyzes the troubling explosion of police foundations and sponsors and corporate paid detail brokers unknown to the public as a social and policy issue and a hidden response to the global police defunding movement The book also considers potential policy responses and community safety alternatives in a more generous society An accessible and compelling read students and scholars in criminology criminal justice law sociology political science anthropology geography as well as policymakers will find this timely book revealing of a neglected growing area of police practice spanning multiple themes and jurisdictions
