

The Sleep Cycle

While we sleep, we actually go through a pattern known as the sleep cycle. The sleep cycle consists of five stages. It can take several 90 minutes to 110 minutes to complete. The cycle repeats itself every hour throughout the night.

The first stage is called light or moving sleep. During this time, we begin to awaken and still notice but much slower than when we are awake. Our heart rate is still pumping, and our brain is still in control of the outside world as we are easily woken from this stage. Breathing is very even during this stage. Sometimes our muscles will contract, and we get the feeling of falling.

During stage two, we begin to prepare ourselves for deep sleep. Our eyes stop moving, and our body temperature gets lower. Our brain waves and heart rate slow down further. We completely shut the outside world as the outside world is processed information as slow as during the day. This time is the longest part of our cycle. It makes up over 50% of our total sleep time.

The Sleep Cycle

Stage 1 of our sleep patterns, we begin actually changing off again. Our brain (which we called delta waves) starts to quickly differentiate between awake and asleep. The stage when some people can talk in their sleep or even jump out of bed usually happens when we begin stage two or our REM or deep sleep.

Stage 2 is the first or our REM stage of our cycle. We can move to a deep sleep or even nearly dying state (sometimes they are called delta waves). Our heart rate and body temperature are at their lowest points. If you try this stage, you can feel confused for a couple of minutes.

Our REM (rapid eye movement) stage, our brain waves change get to REM stage, we begin to move and talk the same as when we are awake. Our heart rate, and breathing rate all rise during REM. Our eyes move very quick to left and right about. This is when we have most of our dreams. We are spend less time in this stage, for example, babies may spend 50% of being in REM whereas an adult spend around 20%.
