Students read a short passage and analyze a diagram to make a claim supported by evidence.

4. Embryology
 Some homologous structures are only visible in the embryos of organisms. An embryo is a very early stage in the development of a living being when it is just starting to form from a fertilized egg. The homologous structures visible in embryos often disappear as the organism develops further. However, these structures are clues to the evolutionary relationships between organisms.

The illustration shows some examples of the embryos of different animals. Notice the gill slits, tail, forelimb buds, and hindlimb buds in each animal's embryo.

Do the organisms in the diagram likely share a common ancestor?

Genetic Evidence in DNA
 Genetic material found in all organisms. Changes, or mutations, in DNA can lead to new traits in an organism. Mutations accumulate over time as organisms evolve. Biologists can determine evolutionary relationships between organisms by comparing their DNA. The more closely related two organisms are, the more similar the DNA of each organism is.

1. Fossil Evidence
 Some of the most important evidence of evolution comes from fossils. Many fossils are found within rock layers. The oldest layers in a formation will usually be at the bottom, unless the formation has been disturbed by geological forces. Therefore, fossils found in these older layers are from organisms that lived a very long time ago. Organisms whose fossils are found in upper layers, but not lower ones, most likely evolved more recently. This is called the law of superposition.

Scientists can also tell when an organism went extinct if its fossils are not found above a certain point.

The diagram to the right shows the organisms in which fossils are found in a rock formation. So, most organisms don't leave fossils. In a rock formation, fossils from many areas to better understand how organisms arose and went extinct.

Look to the right, the organisms in which fossils are found in a rock formation.

Evolutionary Fossils
 Transitional fossils have characteristics that are intermediate with both earlier and later forms. These fossils show evolution in progress. For example, scientists can see the evolution of horses through the fossil record. The earliest horse ancestor, Hyracotherium, had a small body and four toes.

Diagram above shows horse evolution. The diagram also shows the leg bones of a horse ancestor called Merychippus.
