free physical and mental state by applying the principles of tai chi into Chan walking while chanting into a calm mental state of Chan Ding which is similar to Samadhi in Hindu yoga Master Nan shows us how to enter the state of Chan ding by combining two coordinated repetitive movements Chan walking 1st movement and chanting 2nd movement the name of Buddha mentally or orally If you do not want to chant the Buddhist way you can chant quietly the non religious six healing sounds as shown in the booklet Walking is a good repetitive exercise to generate new neurological reflexes especially when one is in the hypnagogic state in Chan Zen in Japanese meditation called Ding in Chinese Hypnagogia is the transitional period of threshold consciousness between wakefulness and sleep In this empty mental state you can rewrite your programs reflexes This is the most important aspect of integrative body mind training like yoga tai chi and qigong According to Master Nan in order to practice meditation with good results you have to reach and state in the mental condition called Ding in 4 principal daily activities i e the S w i y the four dignified modes of daily activities i e walking standing sitting and meditating in a lying down posture Thomas Cleary has written the following about Nan s works and methodology There is no question that Master Nan s work is a cut above anything else available from modern authors either academic or sectarian and I would like to see his work gain its rightful place in the English speaking world Source Master Nan book review The Cultivation of Practice translated by J C Cleary Thomas Cleary is an author and translator of Buddhist Daoist Confucian and Muslim classics and of The Art of War a treatise on management military strategy and statecraft He lives in Oakland California a city on the West Coast of the United States The author of this booklet Dr George Ho 1946 has supplemented Master Nan s inspirational but vague instructions with related medical information and explanations For instance According to Dr George Ho s citation of medical evidence Chan walking is better than many complicated tai chi or qi gong movements because according to Bloomberg 2008 the communication between neurons is bilateral This is why repetitive rhythmic movements like walking and chanting facilitate synaptic connections by increasing ties and neurotransmitters of the synaptic connections Bloomberg uses this finding to prove the regeneration ability of the brain to design the rhythmic movement s program to treat childhood ADHD with significant results This booklet is full of useful information to help you become disease free all the way into your ripe old age The author of this booklet Dr George Ho is an example of how Master Nan s wisdom has helped him Just like Master Nan Dr Ho who is over 70 does not need glasses for reading writing and driving He can still play single tennis like a young man His voice is young and he can sing well To see how healthy is the 72 years old Dr Ho please visit his YouTube channel by searching for Dr George Ho on YouTube which has over 4000 subscribers and 700 000 views There are 129 videos in English and the rest in Chinese Most of the videos are health related All of Dr Ho s Kindle books have the support and enrichment of at least one of his YouTube videos The YouTube video that introduces this booklet is called Chan walking with breathing practice for health and longevity by Huai jin Nan supplement and the link is <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=UwJW0rjUkFY> Many aging baby boomers like to do exercises that are less challenging physically Tai Chi yoga golfing and
