Knowledge Assessment Methodology And World Bank:

The Knowledge Economy, the Kam Methodology and World Bank Operations Derek H.C Chen, Carl J.

Dahlman, 2005 This paper highlights the importance of knowledge for long term economic growth It presents the concept of the knowledge economy an economy where knowledge is the main engine of economic growth The paper also introduces the knowledge economy framework which asserts that sustained investments in education innovation information and communication technologies and a conducive economic and institutional environment will lead to increases in the use and creation of knowledge in economic production and consequently result in sustained economic growth In order to facilitate countries trying to make the transition to the knowledge economy the Knowledge Assessment Methodology KAM was developed It is designed to provide a basic assessment of countries readiness for the knowledge economy and identifies sectors or specific areas where policymakers may need to focus more attention or future investments The KAM is currently being widely used both internally and externally to the World Bank and frequently facilitates engagements and policy discussions with government officials from client countries The World Bank Research Program, 2005-2007, 2008 This pocket sized reference on key environmental data for over 200 countries includes key indicators on agriculture forestry biodiversity energy emission and pollution and water and sanitation The volume helps establish a sound base of information to help set priorities and measure progress toward environmental sustainability goals Knowledge, Productivity, and Innovation in Nigeria Ismail Radwan, Giulia Pellegrini, 2010-03-09 Nigeria has a bold national vision of becoming one of the world s top 20 economies by 2020 However despite being the 8th most populous country in the world it ranks 41st in terms of GDP and 161st in terms of GDP per capita Nigeria has long depended on oil for its exports and government revenues This dependence has led to rent seeking and a reluctance to examine potential avenues for economic diversification The authors of Knowledge Productivity and Innovation in Nigeria believe that the goal of becoming a top twenty economy can only be achieved if Nigeria makes the transition to a new economy rooted in the 21st century that harnesses the power of knowledge and avoids a static oil based growth strategy Knowledge has always been central to development but new technologies have made it globally accessible Countries such as the Republic of South Korea India and the United States that have exploited new technologies and know how have pushed their innovation and productivity frontiers Countries that have failed to do so risk remaining mired in poverty In order to achieve Vision 2020 Nigeria must move beyond the stop start patterns of oil based development that have characterized it since independence It must create a stable and prosperous economy based on a critical mass of knowledge workers Knowledge Productivity and Innovation in Nigeria examines how Nigeria can prepare for this century and where its leaders can focus to achieve their vision presenting the experiences of other countries from which Nigeria can learn Cases on Applying Knowledge Economy Principles for Economic Growth in Developing

István Kiglics, 2007 India and the Knowledge Economy Carl J. Dahlman, Anuja Utz, World Bank Institute, 2005 India has made significant progress in its economic and social development in the past two decades with an impressive growth level which can be attributed to the far reaching reforms embarked on in 1991 and to opening the economy to global competition However in today's global knowledge economy India will need to use its knowledge capacity more effectively to achieve its development goals of raising the productivity of agriculture industry and services and reducing poverty levels This publication examines the progress made so far towards a knowledge economy and considers options to strengthen the economic and institutional regime to develop educated and skilled workers to create an efficient innovation system and build a dynamic information infrastructure The Knowledge-based Economy in Transition Countries Krzysztof Piech, 2004

Land Management Information Systems in the Knowledge Economy, 2007 The economies of most African countries rely heavily on agriculture and other land and land based activities such as tourism mining and livestock production Indeed these are the core activities through which African countries participate in the global economy Moreover land is key to food security and the social cultural needs of most communities in Africa It has also been established that the performance of most sectors of the economies of African countries is indeed tied to that of the land sector The management of this sector must therefore be accorded priority attention in all countries in order to unlock the overall performance of national economies This is best done through comprehensive land policies developed to address all the cross sectoral needs and the unique circumstances in each of the countries It is in response to this challenge that the African Union AU the African Development Bank AfDB and the Economic Commission for Africa ECA embarked on an exercise to develop a continental framework to guide land policy formulation and implementation in AU member States However the effective formulation and implementation of land policies can only be best done in circumstances where all the land information necessary is availed in a suitable timely and up to date form to enable expedient decision making by the policy planners in each of the sectors provided by publisher Japan, Moving Toward a More Advanced Knowledge Economy:
