

NOMEX™ TYPE 414

NOMEX™ Type 414 is a woven fiber-reinforced, nonwoven fabric, non-fused and nonporous sheet. It is chemically and thermally stable to NOMEX™ Type 414 heat-treated fiber under different conditions of operation in most processes. NOMEX™ Type 414 is produced in the modulus of 100% or 200% (designated by 100 and 200, respectively) in 15 mil, 20 mil and 30 mil thickness. NOMEX™ Type 414 is available in a reinforced fabric with heat-treated or a non-reinforced fabric and the fabric including or without the fabric edges in other applications where the specific characteristics are desirable. Look for NOMEX™ products under another nameplate in our line of heat-treated or non-heat-treated nonwoven applications for an improved performance in your NOMEX™ Type 414.

Please note:

The properties in this data sheet are based on average values indicated and are not intended to represent individual lots or individual pieces of material. These values are based on an average "typical" condition of production on 200, 100% modulus fabric. When you use other modulus of reinforcing materials, NOMEX™ fabric heat-treated without glass fibers in the reinforcing material, Nomex 414 is based on the average values, but in some applications the actual values may vary. It is necessary to know the type of the sample condition to select an appropriate reinforcing application.

Electrical properties

The typical electrical properties listed for NOMEX™ Type 414 were determined in accordance with the IEC 60243 standard using a range of test conditions. The following table shows typical values for 20 mil thickness at a temperature of 25°C. These values differ depending on design, material differences, manufacturing conditions, moisture in reinforcement, test method, thickness of the fabric, and the type of other materials used. The test shows typical values for 20 mil thickness. The values were determined at 25°C unless noted otherwise. The geometry of the fabric was as defined in the test method. The values are high values for the material. The values
