Against Non-governmental Organizations? Nidhi Srinivas, 2012-04-15 NGO s Non Governmental Organizations are possibly the most visible arm of policy and practice in development studies and questions of improving their efficacy in terms of operational efficiency goal attainment and assessing development impact are paramount This book illuminates the dangers of over conceptualizing NGOs as representative actors of civil society as well as the problems of ignoring questions of power particularly in mobilizing knowledge for development outcomes The author argues that the group of actors usually termed NGOs operate within the forces of the development industry generating troubling questions of power and accountability Controversially the book argues that There is no single authoritative understanding of the term NGO The historical perception of the non governmental has shifted with contradictory meanings that make it arduous to establish a single understanding of the NGO There is a certain understanding embedded within international aid agencies as well as professional schools that NGOs are autonomous agents committed to international development towards accepted public goods in cooperation with state level actors

Managing Nongovernmental Organizations Frederik Claeyé, 2014-03-26 The idea that international development aid needs to be better managed and coordinated gained currency in the early 1990s The increasing emphasis on management has resulted in the present vogue of managing for development results as one of the central tenets in the discourse on international aid But how appropriate are these ideas tools and techniques for non governmental development organizations NGOs and how much does geographic context matter Examining the current debate on aid effectiveness and the role of NGOs in contributing to it this book highlights the critical importance of understanding how the global and the local interact to increase aid efficacy and develop more culturally astute ways of managing NGOs With a focus on NGOs active in sub Saharan Africa as case studies author Frederik Claeys demonstrates that NGOs are not mere passive recipients of management knowledge and practices emanating from the global governance structure of international aid but actively engage with these ideas and practices to translate and rework them through a local cultural lens This process results in the emergence of unique hybrid management systems that combine the pressure to become more business like with the mission to satisfy the demands of the communities they serve
