

The Sleep Cycle

While we sleep, we actually go through a pattern known as the sleep cycle. The sleep cycle consists of five stages. It can take several 90 minutes to 110 minutes to complete. The cycle repeats itself every hour throughout the night.

The first stage is called light or moving sleep. During this time, we open our muscles and still notice but much slower than when we are awake. Our heart rate and breathing slow down. We can be aware of the sounds around us. We are easily woken from this stage. Breathing is very even during this stage. Sometimes our muscles will contract, and we get the feeling of falling.

During stage two, we become deeper. Breathing for sleep deepens. Our eyes stop moving, and our body temperature gets lower. Our brain waves and heart rate slow down further. We completely shut the outside world as the sounds around us. The brain starts to process information we have gathered throughout the day. This leads to be the longest part of our cycle. It makes up over 50% of our total sleep time.

The Sleep Cycle

Stage 1 of our sleep patterns, we become slowly changes get again. Our brain (which we called delta waves) starts to quickly. After hours of being awake, it is time for sleep when some people can talk in their sleep or even sleepwalk. But usually happens when our cycle comes from our REM to REM sleep.

Stage 2 is the first non-REM stage of our cycle. We can move to a deep sleep for some really sleeping time (sometimes, they are called delta waves). Our heart rate and body temperature are at their lowest point. If you try this stage, you can feel confused for a couple of minutes.

After REM (rapid eye movement) sleep, our brain waves change get to REM sleep. We know about that the state is when we are awake. Our heart rate, and breathing rate of you during REM. Our eyes start to wiggle to tell that they closed. This is when we have most of our dreams. We are spend less time in this stage, for example, babies may spend 50% of being in REM whereas an adult spend around 20%.
