Workbook for Introductory Statistics for the Behavioral Sciences Robert B. Ewen,1976 Introductory Statistics for the Behavioral Sciences Robert B. Ewen,2014-05-10 Introductory Statistics for the Behavioral Sciences is a workbook on statistical procedures and formulas that are relevant to research and field work The book explains frequency distributions graphs and measures of central tendency The workbook uses as an example hypothetical scores of a test given to students in four universities The book then has sections on reminders and problems to guide the reader Other topics the book discusses include measures of variability transformed scores probability and general strategy of inferential statistics Other subjects the book also covers include inferences about the mean of a single population and testing hypotheses about the differences between the means of two populations The workbook also includes practice problems on linear correlation prediction and other correlational techniques such as the Spearman rank order correlation coefficient or the point biserial correlation coefficient The book also includes review chapters on normal curves standard error procedures and inferential statistics The workbook can be a great aid for students of behavioral and physical sciences where statistics is applied in research and analysis An Introduction to the Theory of Statistics George Udny Yule,1927 The Teaching and Learning of Mathematics at University Level Derek Holton,2006-04-11 This book is the final report of the ICMI study on the Teaching and Learning of Mathematics at University Level As such it is one of a number of such studies that ICMI has commissioned The other Study Volumes cover assessment in mathematics education gender equity research in mathematics education the teaching of geometry and history in mathematics education All of these Study Volumes represent a statement of the state of the art in their respective areas We hope that this is also the case for the current Study Volume The current study on university level mathematics was commissioned for essentially four reasons First universities world wide are accepting a much larger and more diverse group of students than has been the case. Consequently universities have begun to adopt a role more like that of the school system and less like the elite institutions of the past. As a result the educational and pedagogical issues facing universities have changed. Second, although university student numbers have increased significantly, there has not been a corresponding increase in the number of mathematics majors. Hence mathematics departments have to be more aware of their students' needs in order to retain the students they have and to attract future students. As part of this awareness, departments of mathematics have to take the teaching and learning of mathematics more seriously than perhaps they have in the past.

Introductory Statistics with Applications in General Insurance I. B. Hossack, J. H. Pollard, B. Zehnwirth, 1999-04. This is a new edition of a very successful introduction to statistical methods for general insurance practitioners. No prior statistical knowledge is assumed and the mathematical level required is approximately equivalent to school mathematics. Whilst the book is primarily introductory, the authors discuss some more advanced topics including simulation, calculation of risk premiums, credibility theory, estimation of outstanding claim provisions, and risk theory. All topics are illustrated by examples drawn from general insurance and references for further reading are given. Solutions to most of the exercises are included. For the new edition, the opportunity has been taken to make minor improvements and corrections throughout the text, to rewrite some sections to improve clarity, and to update the examples and references. A new section dealing with estimation has also been added.
