Ecosystems in the Era of Digital Innovation: Exploring the Transformational Impact of Pervasive Digital Technologies on Industrial-Age Business Contexts and Incumbent Firms Fabian Nischak, 2020-12-02 The Internet's emergence has significantly changed how people, communities, and societies behave, interact, and live. Today, people are accustomed to fulfilling their needs by taking advantage of giant online places, for example, the exchange of goods, video streaming, or social interaction. A driving force within this powerful development is represented by the growing diffusion of digital technologies. Enabled by technological advances, nearly every artifact is or can be equipped with digital technologies. With the increasing digitization and hybridization of physical objects, established innovation and value commercialization logics are brought into question. Recapitulating today's prominent players such as Amazon, Facebook, Apple, etc., highlights the emergence of a new ecosystem philosophy in practice, in which diverse third-party contributors are orchestrated via a digital platform and carefully considered in the core firms' innovation activities. To shed light on this complex phenomena, this dissertation explores first the ecosystem concept and its particular relation to information systems, second, investigates the specific situation of industrial-age manufacturing contexts characterized by a physical core product that cannot be digitally substituted, and third, focusses on the specific nature of digital platform ecosystems to distill respective dimensions and characteristics.
