How the Structure of Choices Influences Consumer Decisions and Experiences Kristen Elizabeth Duke, 2019 This dissertation contains three papers that together demonstrate how the structure of a choice process and of the information consumers encounter can influence what they think feel and do Chapter 1 investigates how the structure of a choice process and in particular the timing of a decision to act relative to the timing of the action influences how individuals feel at the point of acting We demonstrate that the emotional experience of guilt is composed of two dissociable sources one tied to the decision to act and one tied to the behavior itself With this unpacking we find that introducing a temporal gap between one s decision to act and one s behavior allows decision guilt to decay which reduces the guilt at the point of acting and carries important behavioral consequences Chapter 2 probes the structure of a purchasing interaction We compare two ways that the purchase and quantity decisions in a purchase process can be organized In one customers make the purchase and quantity decisions separately in the other customers simultaneously indicate whether and how much to buy We find that the simultaneous consideration of both choices changes the psychology of how people decide and ultimately increases their willingness to purchase In 27 lab experiments and a large field experiment we find that this quantity integration can lead to substantial lift Finally chapter 3 reveals how the structure of one aspect of a customer interaction a small monetary incentive can influence what people believe and accordingly what they do We show that customers who encounter a small surcharge for failing to perform some behavior infer that this behavior is more socially normative than those who encounter a small discount for performing it This inference carries key consequences changing how people feel and what they decide to do in the future Collectively these three chapters demonstrate the critical importance of the structuring of choices and information for consumers beliefs emotional responses decisions and behaviors

Consumer Behavior: Theory and Practice Charles Glenn Walters, 1974 Inside Consumption S. Ratneshwar, David Glen Mick, 2005-11-16 Following on from The Why of Consumption this book examines motivational factors in diverse consumption behaviours In a world where consumption has become the defining phenomenon of human life and society it addresses the effects of critical life events on consumption motives and the sociological and intergenerational influences on consumer motives and preferences Its cross disciplinary approach brings together some of the leading scholars from diverse subject areas to examine the central question about consumption why This is a unique and invaluable contribution to the area and an essential asset for all those involved in researching teaching or studying consumption and consumer behaviour How Behavioral Economic Method Explains And Predicts Johnny Ch Lok, 2019-07-18 Reducing time pressure consumption methods How can sellers persuade consumers to choose to buy their products or consume their services in time pressure environment easily It is a valuable research topic to concern how to know how consumer individual decision making to spend his/her available resources time money and efforts or consumption related aspects as well as how and why he/she chooses the preference brand to buy any kind of products or consume its services when he/she chooses to buy the brand of products or consume its services Hence marketers need to obtain an in-depth knowledge of consumer buying behavior In any buying process time factor will have about 10% to 40% to influence consumer decision When the consumer feels hurry to consume e.g. planning to go to travel when he/she needs to choose to buy which airline's air ticket and what day and time is the right air ticket prebooking purchase decision right time choice or enrolling which school to be chosen course to study decision e.g. how long time is needed to be chosen which school is the most suitable to provide the most suitable courses studying choice change purchase warm clothes to wear in winter when is the suitable time to choose to buy the cheaper warm clothes to prepare to wear in winter e.g. Jan to Mar April to June July to Aug month when is the most suitable time to buy another new house to live when the property consumer buyer has lived present house for long time e.g. three years or more All of these issues will include time factor to influence the consumer feels when he/she ought choose to buy the kind of product or consume the kind of service However the other factors will also include to influence his/her decision e.g. family friend relationship factor advertising factor social status factor cultural difference factor personal psychological need level or satisfactory level factor young or old age factor income level factor economic environment factor material enjoyable need factor etc factors

Understanding How Consumer Behavior Changes Johnny Ch Lok, 2020-09-19 In consumption psychological view point the current approach is the term dialectics considers all forms of human behavior thus the current approach to the study of consumer divided into four approaches materialism approach implies that consumer behavior is shaped by the material environment e.g. money possessions etc. change approach means consumer behavior is dynamic in nature it is always in a process of continuous motion transformation and change Totality means consumption behavior is interconnected with other forms of human contradiction means views changes in consumer behavior as arising from their internal contradictions like moods emotions etc. The approach studies the consumer as a complex total whole and views consumer purchase as well as consumption processes. The current approach to studying consumer behavior uses both the quantitative as well as qualitative approaches. There are three broad research perspectives in consumer behavior they are as follows: Decision making perspective, the experiment perspective and behavioral influence perspective. According to decision making perspective the buying process is a sequential in nature with the consumer perceiving that there exists a problem and that moving across a series of logical and rational steps to solve the problem stages being problem recognition information search evaluation of alternatives purchase decision and post purchase behavior it emphasizes rational logical and cognitive approach to consumer decision making and purchase process. The experiential perspective believes that not all buying may be rational and logical in some cases buying results are from a consumer's desire for fun and fantasy pleasures emotions and moods. The perspective emphasizes that consumers are feelers as well as thinkers. The behavioral influence perspective holds that forces in the environment stimulate a consumer to make purchases without developing beliefs and attitudes about the product. In general quantitative research is used by the positivists and qualitative research is used by interpretivists. How to use quantitative research in consumer behavior. It comprises i) research techniques that are used to gather quantitative data over large samples randomly and ii) statistical tools and techniques e.g. survey observation and experiments techniques. Thus type of research is descriptive in nature. It is primarily used by the positivists when studying consumer behavior with a focus on prediction of consumer behavior and techniques are also used by dialectics approach. How to use qualitative research in consumer behavior. It comprises i) research techniques that are used to gather quantitative data over small samples techniques e.g. depth interviews focus group of study is subjective in nature. The focus is on understanding consumption behavior and consumption pattern the objective is to gain an understanding of consumer behavior and the causes marketing situations are unique and hence the finding can't be generalized to marketing situations. It is primarily used by the interpretivists when studying consumer behavior. However the qualitative techniques are also used by dialectics approach. Today both approaches are used to study consumer behavior. In some cases qualitative research may act as an indicator to qualitative research through case studies and other qualitative measures. Qualitative research is very often a prelude to quantitative research are used to prepare scales for surveys and experiments. Brand image attention of behavioral consumption of prediction method.
