Abstract

Nigerian English newspaper headlines have been examined mostly from stylistic, pragmatic, critical discourse analytic and critical linguistic perspective but not from a syntactic perspective in terms of lexical and functional heads. This study, therefore, examines lexical and functional heads in Nigerian newspaper headlines. The data for this study were collected from Nigerian national newspapers including 'The Punch', 'The Nation', 'Nigerian Tribune', 'Vanguard' and 'The Sun'. The study uses the X-bar theory of Generative Grammar to syntactically analyze the data. It is discovered that both lexical and functional heads are projected in Nigerian newspaper headlines. However, their representation depends on the syntactic configuration of the headlines. Sentence type headlines have more heads than phrasal headlines. While both heads occur in the headlines, lexical heads have more projection than functional heads.

1. Introduction

Today, newspapers are widely read by a good number of people across the world. In the Nigerian society, a lot of people, most especially the elite, read the newspapers to get adequate updates concerning events and happenings in the society. Consequently, this has led to the evolution of a plethora of more newspapers in the country over the years. Also, these newspapers are characterized by headlines which project the gist of the stories and events in them. Newspaper headlines are often constructed in certain structures to specifically capture the highlights of news and stories in the newspapers. The headlines are often constructed to capture the interest of the readers since they determine whether people will eventually read the stories in the newspaper. Ungerer (2000: 48) notes that 'a headline describes news story in a few words, informs quickly and accurately and arouses the readers' curiosity'. Similarly, Tiono (2003) argues that in order to attract readers' attention, journalists make the headlines

Adverb Licensing and Clause Structure in English Dagmar Haumann, 2007-03-07 This monograph provides an in depth investigation of the structural integration and the licensing of adverbs in relation to clause structure with special emphasis on the structural implementation of the relation between the position and interpretation of adverbs The book substantiates the hypothesis that the licensing of adverbs within and across the three layers of the clause is contingent on specifier head agreement and that variation in the linear order of adverbs and other elements of the clause follows from the interplay of a small number of factors The central claims made are functional projections hosting adverbs are not confined to the inflectional and complementizer layer of the clause but also play a central role in the shaping of the lexical layer postverbal adverbs are realized within a semantically empty verbal projection and licensed under specifier head agreement by proxy and adverbs that occur within the complementizer layer of the clause do so by either move or merge
