Hybrid Laser Welding in API X65 and X70 Steels Andrés Fabricio Fischdick Acuña,2016 Hybrid laser welding presents an important advance in productivity due to high welding speeds However fast cooling rates are inherent to the process affecting the resultant microstructures and joint performance In this research three API steels were welded using hybrid laser welding with three distinct preheating conditions The specimens which were obtained using one hybrid laser root pass and two other GMAW filling passes were subjected to microstructural characterization and performance evaluation using hardness and toughness measurements Incomplete joints with only the hybrid root pass and completed joints root and filling passes were evaluated Hardness mapping revealed as the critical area the top portion of hybrid laser fusion zone which was subsequently reheated by the GMAW filling pass Optical and scanning electron microscopy revealed a bainitic martensitic microstructure with the proportion of those two phases varying as a function of the preheating Miniaturized Charpy V notch testing was used to evaluate the local toughness and ductile to brittle transition of several regions within the joint Fractographic analysis confirmed the abrupt transition from ductile to brittle behavior The localized fracture toughness testing showed an adequate joint performance for all tested conditions Nevertheless the hardness values meet the requirements only for higher preheating temperature conditions
