Ben walked out the house. The red door swung open to his world. Ben was an early teenager of ten, peering on the Fourth Step. He brushed his hair and put on a graphic, then their mother peered at him as they ate breakfast together.

Ben talked with the doctor in the hospital. He explained his condition and how the other kids were doing. He said he was going to be a doctor when he grew up.

By the time he was ten, Ben had been drawing the red door in pencil on his wall. He had drawn it over and over again, always making it look like it was up and out of the ground.
