During the early 1950s, only one type of video game was available: the arcade game. These were not popular and were only available in certain cities and at a certain time. The first home console was the Magnavox Odyssey, which was released in 1972. People didn't want to buy it but it sold at the shops for less than cost to the store. Atari, which was founded in 1972, was the first company to create that allowed users to play lots of different games. It was a huge success and it helped to lay the foundation for the modern video game industry.

Another console was the Magnavox Odyssey 2, which was released in 1975. It was a success, although it did not do as well as the first console. 1970s

In the 1980s, home computers became more available and a software platform for video games. This was the timing when games such as Pac-Man, Tetris, and Super Mario Bros. were created. These games were available for and supported by a wide audience. In the same time, arcade games such as Frogger and Tetris were still available in arcades.

The 1980s saw the release of some of the first computer graphics and games of all time. In 1982, Nintendo released the Super Nintendo Entertainment System (SNES) and a line of Super Mario Bros. which was also very popular. These consoles allowed players to play such as Super Mario Bros. and other games. The success of these consoles led to the creation of the modern video game industry.

During the 1990s, 3D graphics became available on the PlayStation and Nintendo 64, which allowed players to play games such as Super Mario Bros. and other games.
