McMaster, 1988* Well Completion Failure Ali Khaleel Ali, 2014 This research project discusses the different types of well completion failures including mechanical failures chemical failures and erosion failures. It also generally discusses the well completion design which includes an overview of the well completion design considerations and the major points that shall be considered in the completion phase. Additionally it discusses the material selection for well completion and its role in minimizing the possible well completion failures. In this research project historical data which were originally collected from a research paper of Reliability of Well Completion Equipment by Molnes E. The data were last updated in 1992. The historical data are based on 800 well completion equipment failures that cover 6600 years of operation of wells in the Norwegian Sector of the North Sea area is collected. The data is analyzed using Excel and SPSS. The results are discussed in order to get a better view of well completion failures. This research project focuses on finding which parts of the well completion system fail more frequently. Also the research focuses on studying the possible relationship between the number of failures of the different equipment in the system and the number of years in service. In addition the research compares oil production wells gas condensate production wells water injection wells gas injection wells and observation wells in order to determine which type of wells has a higher number of failures in comparison to other well types. The research also answers the question of which parts of the well completion system the cause most workovers. All of the results analyzed and discussed in this research project are based on the offshore well environment of the North Sea area.
