PERSPECTIVE AND NARRATOR

The events of The Invisible Man are described by a third-person omniscient narrator in an objective journalistic style. However, there is an exception in Chapters 4 and 19–23.

These chapters are presented through a mix of first-person narration as told by Griffin, whose characterization of events may or may not be reliable, and the third-person narrator.

TENSE

The Invisible Man is told in past tense for all chapters other than the Epilogue. The Epilogue is told in present tense.

ABOUT THE TITLE

The full title, The Invisible Man: A Grotesque Romance, describes the main character, Griffin, who has made himself invisible through a secret process. The subtitle refers to a scientific romance—a term used to describe fantasy before the term science fiction had been coined.

📖 In Context

England During the Late Victorian Age

Wells was born during the Victorian era, which spanned 1837 to 1901. Written in quick succession from 1894–97, his earliest novels—including The Invisible Man—reflect the social, cultural, and philosophical influences of this period.

Social class and social conventions played an important role in the daily lives of people in England during the Victorian Age. Members of the upper class were characterized by their sense of superiority, while members of the lower and middle classes often aspired to emulate them, often adopting upper-class conventions in their own lives. This created class tensions between those who conformed to social conventions and those who did not. In The Invisible Man, Wells depicts characters from the country, who tend to be religious, superstitious, and accepting of the supernatural, as more
