

Earth Hour 2023

From the lights of earth and Europe

It's nearly time for lights out. Earth Hour 2023 is happening this weekend.

The annual one-hour event will begin in the UK at 8.30 pm, on 27th March.

Earth Hour happens each year on the last Saturday in March in order to raise awareness of climate change and loss of nature.

The event was launched in 2007 by the WWF. It began in Sydney, Australia, as a symbolic and energy-saving event. Over two million people and businesses turned off their lights for an hour.

Since then, it has spread globally and now millions of people in over 180 countries join in. If people want to take part, the main thing they can do is switch off their lights for an hour on Saturday night.

However, there are other ways to get involved too.

As part of their latest mission 'Biggest Hour for Earth', the WWF is encouraging people to do something positive for the planet.

On their website, the WWF says, "It is more than just an hour in the dark. It is also a time for reflection on our overwhelming impact on the planet and how we can make a difference, together."

As well as getting millions of people to join in, the organizers of Earth Hour are hoping that event leaders will pay attention to and take more action on climate change.

The WWF says, "Earth Hour reminds us that even small actions can make a big difference. When we make changes to our own lives to reduce our footprint, we inspire those around us to do the same."

What will you do to help make a difference during this year's Biggest Hour for Earth?

NASA Unveils New Spacesuit

It's been more than 50 years since anyone set foot on the Moon. When astronauts return there as part of NASA's upcoming Artemis 3 mission, they'll be wearing new, ultra-modern spacesuits.

The first prototype of a new suit was unveiled recently. It is the first prototype of the new suit in 50 years.

These old suits were hard to move in and didn't fit every astronaut.

The new suit is easier to move around in and is a better fit for women too. There's a larger area to allow more mobility, the helmet has lower weight but just as long and temperatures can drop to -100°C.

The suit will also protect the astronauts from other dangers such as radiation. On the Moon, radiation levels can be 200 times more than those on Earth.

In space, there is no air to breathe so astronauts also have to provide themselves with enough oxygen.

The unveiled Artemis 1 mission successfully returned to Earth at the end of last year. Artemis 3 is set for launch in 2024. It will take a crew further from Earth than anyone has ever gone before.

Artemis 3 is set for 2025 and will see astronauts remaining for the first time in half a century. NASA also has plans to build a base on the Moon and a new space

Did you know...?

- Only 14 people have ever been to the Moon and, of those, only 12 have ever set foot on it.
- Neil Armstrong was the first person to walk on the Moon as part of the Apollo 11 mission in 1969.
- The last man on the Moon was Gene Cernan, Commander of the Apollo 17 mission in 1972. Before leaving, he built and buried his daughter's initials into the dust, which like Armstrong's first footsteps, are still there.

switch lights and even an 80-minute walk.

Bill Nelson is NASA's administrator. On the new suit, "we not only match the fit of the current suit worn on the Moon, but they also have opportunities for more people to experience a return to the Moon than ever before."

The new suit has been chosen up in black in order to protect some of its secrets. When it goes to the Moon, it will be white. This helps to prevent it from getting too hot.

Artemis 3 is set for 2025 and will see astronauts remaining for the first time in half a century.

NASA also has plans to build a base on the Moon and a new space
