German Medical Data Sciences 2021: Digital Medicine: Recognize - Understand - Heal Tim Beißbarth,Jochem König,Claudia Ose,Geraldine Rauch,Ulrich Sax,Björn Schreiweis,2021-10-15 Digitization offers great potential especially in medicine Cross domain and cross institutional linkage big data artificial intelligence and robotics can all help to improve research and care but they also pose new challenges to all those involved This book presents the joint proceedings of the GMDS German Medical Data Sciences and TMF its Technology Methodology and Infrastructure platform held entirely online from 26-30 September 2021 as a result of restrictions due to the Coronavirus pandemic. This joint event addresses the opportunities and risks of using new information technologies in medicine as well as the resulting requirements for data protection, data security and ethics. Methodological challenges associated with the preparation, evaluation and interpretation of data volumes which constantly increase in type and scope in the course of digitization are also examined in detail. The 25 papers included here are divided into 5 sections: editorials, artificial intelligence and clinical decision support systems, CDSS, data integration and interoperability, human-computer interaction and software systems and frameworks, and the topics covered are very diverse, ranging from disease detection using retinal imaging through data management and sharing to interactive web applications. Providing an overview of regional research and developments in the field, the book will be of interest to all those working in health technology and medical informatics, researchers and practitioners alike. Using Technology-delivered Learning, 1996. Compiled from articles published in Training Magazine.

Emerging Technologies to Promote and Evaluate Physical Activity Dan J. Graham, James Aaron Hipp, Simon Marshall, Jacqueline Kerr, 2014-10-23. Increasingly, efforts to promote and measure physical activity are achieving greater precision, greater ease of use, and/or greater scope by incorporating emerging technologies. This is significant for physical activity promotion because more precise measurement will allow investigators to better understand where, when, and how physical activity is and is not occurring, thus enabling more effective targeting of particular behavior settings. Emerging technologies associated with the measurement and evaluation of physical activity are noteworthy because:

1. Their ease of use and transferability can greatly increase the external validity of measures and findings.
2. Technologies can significantly increase the ability to analyze patterns.
3. They can improve the ongoing systematic collection and analysis of public health surveillance due to real-time capabilities associated with many emerging technologies.
4. There is a need for research and papers about the cyberinfrastructure required to cope with big data, multiple streams, processing, aggregation, visualization, etc.
5. Increasingly blurred boundaries between measurement and intervention activity, e.g., the quantified self, self-tracking, movement, may necessitate a reevaluation of the conventional scientific model for designing and evaluating these sorts of studies.

There have been many recent disparate advances related to this topic. Advances such as crowdsourcing allow for input from large, diverse audiences that can help to identify and improve infrastructure for activity, e.g., large group identification of environmental features that are conducive or inhibiting to physical activity on a national and even global scale. Technologies such as Global Positioning Systems (GPS) and accelerometry are now available in many mobile phones and can be used for identifying and promoting activity and also understanding naturalistically occurring activity. SenseCam and other personal visual devices and mobile apps provide person point-of-view context to physical activity, lifestyle, and timing. Further, multiple sensor systems are enabling better identification of types of activities like stair climbing and jumping that could not previously be identified readily using objective measures like pedometers or accelerometers in isolation. The ability of activity sensors to send data to remote servers allows for the incorporation of online technology e.g. employing an online social network as a source of inspiration or accountability to achieve physical activity goals and websites such as Stickk.com enable individuals to make public contracts visible to other users and also incorporates financial incentives and disincentives in order to promote behaviors including physical activity. In addition, the increasing use of active gaming e.g. Wii, Xbox, Kinect in homes, schools, and other venues further underscores the growing link between technology and physical activity.

Improvements in mathematical models and computer algorithms also allow greater capacity for classifying and evaluating physical activity, improving consistency across research studies. Emerging technologies in the promotion and evaluation of physical activity is a significant area of interest because of its ability to greatly increase the amount and quality of global recorded measurements of PA patterns and its potential to more effectively promote PA. Emerging technologies related to physical activity build on our own and others' interdisciplinary collaborations in employing technology to address public health challenges. This research area is innovative in that it uses emerging resources including social media, crowdsourcing, and online gaming to better understand patterns of physical activity.
