

The Half-life of Pennies Lab

(Complete your pennies in approximately 15 minutes)

Imagine living in a town that is 1000 years old and still having more than 1,000 people! That is nearly what the world's oldest system, the Great Pyramids, is as a special artifact preserved in the museum during thousands of years since their building time.

Somehow, every 5,000 years, half of the system is lost as a result of systematic change or random occurrence of some faulty message. In this laboratory you will see how particles can show the same kind of change.

Materials: 100 pennies & large container with a lid

Procedure:

1. Place 100 pennies in the container. Flip the coin.
2. Remove pennies until they have the "heads" side of the coin facing up.

Record the number of coins remaining (heads up) in the number of pennies remaining recorded in the descriptive table. Repeat the system with the number of coins that remain "heads" side of the system until they reach 1. Repeat until you have 10 measurements.

Class Table:

Initial Number	Number of Coins remaining	Number of Coins removed
100	50	50
50	25	25
25	12	13
12	6	6
6	3	3
3	1	2

1. Observe the process and record the data in the table. Remember to record only the coins showing "heads".

2. Observe the graph to plot your data. Label the axes: "Number of coins," "number of coins remaining." Using data from your data table, plotting number of coins remaining on each trial.
