Create Your School Library Writing Center Timothy Horan, 2016-10-16 Colleges typically have writing centers to which students can bring their writing assignments to a peer tutor for assistance but most high schools and middle schools do not. This book advocates for the creation of writing centers in K-12 schools and explains why the school library is the best place for the writing center. There is a glaring absence of writing centers in today's K-12 schools. More and more students are being asked in college entrance testing to submit samples of their writing and employers are expecting their workers to write correctly and clearly. This book addresses the critical lack of writing centers below the undergraduate level. It demonstrates how middle school and high school librarians can create writing centers in their school libraries, explains how to assist students through a one-on-one writing tutorial method, and gives students and teachers the tools for learning and understanding the complex art of writing. Author Timothy Horan, inventor of the School Library Writing Center, establishes why school libraries represent the best and most logical places to create writing centers and why school librarians are the natural choice to direct writing center operations. He then takes readers through the process of creating a writing center from original conception up through opening day. Additional topics covered include how to publicize and grow your School Library Writing Center, maintaining your writing center for efficient operation on a daily basis as well as for years to come, how to become an effective writing center director and writing tutor, the most current technology that can be used to assist in the writing composition and research process, and working with English language learner (ELL) students within your writing center.

design manage implement and evaluate aid projects Often critical of foreign aid either for its apparent ineffectiveness at alleviating poverty or its purported neocolonial implications the academic literature rarely acknowledges the experiences and pressures faced by practitioners themselves as they implement aid funded development projects the meetings paperwork negotiations site visits financial transactions logistical arrangements interviews program activities and beneficiary interactions that keep projects running And yet the impact of aid projects and indeed the impact of development itself often grows out of the daily activities and personal interactions of development practitioners This unique book considers challenges from the perspective of development practitioners who confront technical managerial political theoretical and moral quandaries on a daily basis With chapters written by expert practitioners on different aspects of design and management of international development activities this book examines real issues and navigates the often contradictory demands of local development needs including international donor imperatives limited financial resources time information and assurance of results the competing pulls of administrative efficiency and the desire to alleviate suffering It also gives readers access to the crucial but little heard voices of those who spend their professional lives designing and managing foreign aid projects offering insight into what did or did not work on projects they have managed implemented or evaluated These insights do not seek to identify universally right or wrong ways of doing development instead they highlight pros and cons associated with various approaches and decisions This book provides valuable insights for students and others interested in a development career encourages practitioners to engage in reflection and persuades researchers to further consider the influence of practice on project success or failure
