

Indigenous Fall Equinox

Indigenous Fall Equinox

The fall equinox is when the sun hits the equator at a right angle. The word equinox comes from the Latin word "aequinoxius" meaning "equal days." The equinoxes occur approximately 93 days before and 93 days after the winter solstice. The equinoxes are the only two times of the year when the day and night are of equal length. The equinoxes are also the only two times of the year when the sun is directly above the equator. The equinoxes are also the only two times of the year when the sun is directly above the equator. The equinoxes are also the only two times of the year when the sun is directly above the equator.

With autumn and winter approaching, the weather is changing. The days are getting shorter and the nights are getting longer. The leaves are changing color and falling. The weather is getting cooler and the days are getting shorter.

Indigenous Fall Equinox

In many Indigenous cultures, the fall equinox is a time of reflection and gratitude. It is a time to thank the land and the people who have helped us get through the year. It is a time to give thanks for the food we have eaten and the people we have met. It is a time to give thanks for the love and support of our family and friends. It is a time to give thanks for the life we have lived and the life we have yet to live.
